Thunderbirds

- Thunderbirds is a British mid-1960s television show devised by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson. The series followed the adventures of International Rescue, an organisation created to help those in grave danger using technically advanced equipment and machinery.
- The series has become a cult British institution, popular with both children and adults and was intended to be prime time entertainment for the whole family. A total of 32 episodes of Thunderbirds were made between 1965 and 1966.
- A popular show, the series is still frequently repeated on BBC Two in the UK today and has inspired a number of subsequent television programmes and films.
- The popularity of the series led to the production of three full length feature films “Thunderbirds are GO” in 1966, “Thunderbird 6” in 1968 and “Thunderbirds” (live action film) in 2004.
